Preface to NOMESCO Classification of Surgical Procedures Version 1.6

The Nordic Medico-Statistical Committee (NOMESCO) published the first printed edition of the NOMESCO Classification of Surgical Procedures (NCSP) in 1996. Denmark introduced a Danish version of NCSP (NCSP-D) the same year. Finland and Sweden introduced national versions in 1997 (NCSP-F and NCSP-S respectively), whereas Iceland implemented the Nordic (English-language) version of NCSP (NCSP-E). Norway decided to adopt a Norwegian version of NCSP (NCSP-N), which has been used from the year 1999. Thus all five Nordic countries are now using NCSP.

A procedure for annual updating of NCSP has been established. The responsibility for updating the classification lies with the WHO Collaborating Centre for Classification of Diseases in the Nordic Countries in Uppsala, Sweden. The Centre maintains an electronic discussion group for the discussion of suggested changes and has a Reference group for Nordic classification matters which makes recommendations as to changes in the classification. The formal decisions regarding changes are taken by the Board of the Nordic Classification Centre. So far the Nordic version of NCSP has been updated six times. NCSP Version 1.6 is effective from January 1, 2002.

NOMESCO and the Nordic Classification Centre have decided to make new printed copies of the Nordic version of NCSP available to interested parties on a print-on-demand basis. This book is thus a printed version of NCSP 1.6. The book includes the original preface to the basic Nordic edition of NCSP as well as the guidelines on the structure and use of the classification. The body of the classification incorporates all six updates made so far which have been fully integrated in the text.

The first revision consisted mainly of corrections to the original version, whereas later revisions introduce new codes which can be seen as a development of the classification. These changes are based on suggestions from national classification authorities and the discussion in the electronic forum. The changes introduced between the fifth and sixth revisions are presented in Appendix 2. The changes in the earlier revisions are presented at the website of the Nordic Classification Centre (www.nordclass.uu.se).

There is also a complete table of NCSP-E codes and codetexts in database format available at the Centre website. This database includes all earlier changes to codes and codetexts as well as date for implementation and - when applicable - date of removal or change for each code.

Questions about the maintenance and updating procedure should be directed to the WHO Collaborating Centre for the Classification of Diseases in the Nordic Countries. Requests for printed versions of NCSP should be directed to NOMESCO. This classification is also available at the website of the Nordic Classification Centre, from where it can be downloaded in PDF-format (www.nordclass.uu.se).

Preface to first edition

At the initiative of NOMESCO, a study comparing surgical frequencies and activities in the Nordic countries was set up in the early 1980's and resulted, in 1989, in the publication of an abbreviated Nordic list of surgical procedures for Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden.

Based on the experience gained from this work, it was decided to set up a working group, under NOMESCO, to prepare the structure of a common Nordic classification for surgical procedures.

The following persons were appointed as members of the Working Group: Henning Bay-Nielsen, Chairman (Denmark), Peter Sylvest Olsen (Denmark), Timo Niinimäki (Finland) Steffen Birkeland (Norway), Glen Thorsen (Norway), Sven Aschberg (Sweden) (until January 1992), Hubertus van Paaschen (Sweden) (since January 1992) and Björn Smedby (WHO Collaborating Centre for the Classification of Diseases in the Nordic Countries).

The Working Group prepared a proposal for a Nordic classification for surgical procedures which was presented and approved at a Nordic seminar in November 1991.

At the seminar specialists in each area were appointed to prepare the chapters and as contact persons. In all approximately 100 experts have been associated with the project.

The following persons have been responsible for preparing the chapters:

Steffen Birkeland and Glen Thorsen (Norway): Structure and classification guidelines

Olli Heiskanen (Finland): Chapter A. Nervous system.

Structure and classification guidelines

Introduction

The Classification of Surgical Procedures (NCSP) is based on the traditions of the surgical profession in the Nordic countries and reflects surgical practice in these countries in 1994. It constitutes the first common Nordic classification of surgical procedures.

In producing this classification attention has been paid to generally accepted requirements for surgical procedure components as seen in concurrent classification development. In addition the classification is designed to give reasonable scope for expansion to meet anticipated future advances in the field of surgical procedures. With these updates the NCSP is expected to do good service as a regional classification for some years.

Classification structure

Overview

The NCSP consists of 15 main chapters (A-H, J-N, P-Q) of surgical procedures arranged according to functional-anatomic body system, four subsidiary chapters (T, U, X, Y) containing therapeutic and investigative procedures associated with surgery and one supplementary chapter (Z).

The subsidiary chapters are: Minor surgical procedures (T), Transluminal endoscopy – through natural or artificial body orifices (U), Investigative procedures connected with surgery (X), Procurement of organs and tissue for transplantation (Y).

The procedure codes of the main and subsidiary chapters A-Y are basic procedure codes, each assigned as a unique identifier to a uniquely defined procedure. The basic procedure codes include and represent all accepted surgical procedures and constitute the only complete and independent procedure codes. The supplementary codes of chapter Z serve as general procedure qualifiers, providing additional information to the basic procedure codes. They are always appended to basic procedure codes, and may never be used alone.

Procedure codes described

The NCSP codes consist of three alphabetic characters (positions 1-3 of the code) and two numeric characters (positions 4-5 of the code). All upper-case characters of the English alphabet are permitted as alphabetic characters, except I and O.

The procedure codes are independent of surgical speciality.

Diagnostic information is excluded from procedure codes as a matter of principle, except in procedures that are unique to the diagnosis, and where the diagnostic information is necessary to achieve a concise procedure designation.

E.g.:

FHE 00 Transatrial repair of tetralogy of Fallot

FHH 10 Expansion of VSD in double outlet ventricle

The basic procedure codes will be found at only one place in the classification. The way in which a procedure is related to the functional-anatomical axis determines the position of the code within the classification. In the case of exclusions cross-references to the appropriate codes, code groups or chapters will generally be given.

In order to relate the basic procedure codes to general patient data (e.g. age and sex, etc.), administrative data and elements from other classifications (e.g. diagnosis and histology), computer support is virtually essential. A complete sequential list of codes without annotation will be supplied in text and file formats to facilitate integration into clinical computer systems.

Main chapters A-Q

In the main chapters, the codes are composed as follows:

- The first level (position 1) of the code denotes the chapter, representing in the 15 main chapters the functional-anatomical body system group, e.g.: A – Nervous system.
- The second level (position 2) denotes the functional-anatomical region within the body system in question, e.g.: AA – Skull and intracranial structures.
- The third level (position 3) denotes the general method of the procedure (procedure group), e.g.: AAA – Diagnostic intracranial procedures.
- The numeric characters of the code, (positions 4 and 5), identify the specific procedure within the procedure group, including surgical technique and precise anatomical location.

With this structure, the sequence of character positions within the code has a uniform significance throughout the 15 main chapters of the classification.

Subordinate chapters T-Y

In the subordinate chapters, the body system, corresponding to a main chapter, and body region, corresponding to a main chapter body region group, are denoted by positions 2 and 3 of the code, e.g.: UD – Transluminal endoscopy of ear, nose and larynx corresponding to chapter D – Ear, nose and larynx, and UDQ – Laryngoscopy corresponding to DQ – Larynx. In these chapters positions 4-5 are used to characterise method and technique (procedure) in a manner suitable to the contents of the chapter.

Supplementary chapter Z

The supplementary codes of chapter Z are general qualifiers, applicable in principle to all main and subordinate chapters. The basic procedure codes are not changed in definition or code designation by the addition of one or more supplementary codes.

The character Z in position 1 of the code denotes the chapter as in all other chapters. Characters X, Z and S in position 2 of the code denote unspecified region. The codes are available to characterise procedures of all other chapters. In case a group of codes is specific to a main or subsidiary chapter, the second character identifies the corresponding chapter.

As of this updated edition, the following groups exist:

- ZF codes specify the use of certain techniques in surgery of the heart and major thoracic vessels (chapter F).
- ZX codes characterise various circumstances and events pertaining to the execution of the procedures described in the main and subordinate chapters of the NCSP.
- ZZ codes characterise reconstructive use of tissue: Free tissue transplants (excluding bone and tissue of the eye and orbit); flaps and free microvascular grafts, including composite flaps and microvascular grafts with bone. The codes specify the nature and origin of such transplants or flaps. Finally, there are ZZ codes for the use of tissue expanders in addition to or as an alternative to tissue transplantation.
- ZS codes link the present procedure to previous surgery, with the addition of a position 3 character indicating the main or subordinate chapter of previous surgery.

For future editions, chapter Z groups specific to other main or subsidiary chapters may be developed. However, chapter Z groups specific to chapter X are not envisaged.

Specific elements of the code structure

In all chapters except chapter Z, the use of certain characters in certain positions of the code carries particular significance in the following manner:

- X in position 2 denotes unspecified region within the body system in question.
- W in position 2 denotes reoperations, without specification of region within the body system in question.
- W in position 3 denotes possible procedure groups not presently found in the classification (“Other procedure” groups).
- 9 in position 4 represents possible “other procedures” in the same manner as W in position 3 represents “other procedure groups”.

In the main chapters relating to the major body cavities: G (Chest wall, pleura, mediastinum, diaphragm, trachea, bronchus and lung), J (Digestive system and spleen), K (Urinary system, male genital organs and retroperitoneal space), L (Female genital organs) and M (Obstetric procedures), the position 5 numeric character describes the procedure approach in the following manner:

- 0, 3 and 6 denote: Open or otherwise conventional approach (including blind percutaneous approach).
- 1, 4 and 7 denote: Endoscopic approach through incision or stab (including percutaneous, transvaginal, &c.).
- 2, 5 and 8 denote: Transluminal endoscopic approach (through natural or artificial body orifice).

In chapter F (Heart and major thoracic vessels), the same applies, with the exception that numeric characters 2, 5 and 8 are used for percutaneous transluminal procedures, with or without endoscopy.

In Chapter B (Endocrine system), where transluminal endoscopy is not an option, the position 5 numerals 1, 4 and 7 are reserved for percutaneous endoscopic procedures in the same manner. These are found only in group BC (Adrenal gland). Position 5 numerals 0, 2, 3, 5, 6 and 8 all denote a conventional approach as described above.

In chapters F, G, J, K, L and M, the same position 5 numeric character is used to denote the approach for "other" procedures with the position 4 numeric character 9. In chapters or procedure groups where this use of position 5 to describe the approach does not apply, "other" procedures are described by numeric characters 99 in position 4-5.

In chapter U (Transluminal endoscopy), and in the anatomical groups of chapters T and X relating to main chapters F, G and J-M, wherever appropriate, arrangement of the position 4-5 numeric characters is the same as for the corresponding main chapters.

Guidelines for classification

General guidelines

It is a matter of principle that each and every procedure performed should be characterised by a procedure description (code from the main or subordinate chapters A-Y) as precisely and unambiguously as possible, and always specified to the full five alphanumeric characters of the code. This guideline also applies to the position 4-5 numeric characters 96, 97, 98 and 99 as described above. These codes should not be used as unspecified codes, only to characterise (new) procedures not found in the NCSP. However each of these codes will encompass any number of possible procedures belonging to the procedure group (position 3 group) in question.

The supplementary codes (of chapter Z) are always appended to basic procedure codes, and may never be used alone. They serve only as general procedure qualifiers.

Besides the present guidelines for classification, the individual chapters are provided with detailed instructions in the form of short explanatory texts – inclusions, exclusions, cross-references, pointers to additional codes.

E.g.:

JDD Total gastrectomy

Includes: Omentectomy and resection of adjacent oesophagus

Includes: Local lymph node dissection

Additional code for extended lymph node dissection, see: PJD 98

Concurrent thoracotomy, see: GAB 10

Concurrent splenectomy, see: JMA 10

Subtotal gastrectomy, see: JDC

JDD 00 Total gastrectomy and Roux-en-Y oesophagojejunostomy

JDD 96 Total gastrectomy with other reconstruction

Includes: With construction of reservoir

The use of Includes: above denotes technical aspects or detail modifications of the procedure that fall within the procedure as delimited by the code, but need not necessarily be mandatory for the use of the code. In other instances Includes: may denote synonyms to the terms used in the basic code text.

Notes on terminology

- The code texts are descriptive and intended to be representative of the usage among surgeons in the Nordic countries. The code texts are however not intended to be normative for the terminology used in patient records.

A code text has a delimiting function, often encompassing several closely related modifications of the surgical procedure, and is designed for the purpose of recording the activity of surgical units.

The description of an operation in the patient record may be better served by the use of terms that are more specific or by terminology that is locally accepted and preferred in the individual surgical unit. Provided that the proper procedure codes are used for registration purposes, the NCSP does not aim at replacing surgical terminology in patient records with the basic code texts of the NCSP.

- Open procedures are not usually specified as such in the code texts. Unless otherwise specified, an open approach is assumed.
- The term “excision” embraces extirpation, resection, enucleation and procedures of the same nature, and may be specified as partial or total.

Excisional terms with the suffix “-ectomy” may be partial or total in extent, according to English usage, as opposed to Nordic usage where the suffix “-ectomy” is usually reserved for total or near total excision. In the Nordic language versions, the terms “extirpation”, “resection”, “enucleation” and “-ectomy” should be employed when their use describes the procedure in question more precisely and is consistent with established usage in Nordic surgery.

- The term “lesion” embraces all kinds of local tissue changes, that is tumours in the clinical sense as well as flat tissue changes or defects of a neoplastic, inflammatory, traumatic or any other pathologic nature.

Matrix codes of chapters A, N and T

The main chapters N (Musculoskeletal system), P (Peripheral vascular system), Q (Skin), body region group AC (Peripheral nerves) of chapter A and group TN (Musculoskeletal system) of Chapter T, contain separate specifications for the position 4-5 numeric characters. In chapters P and Q, the codes are fully developed, whereas in chapter N, group AC and group TN, matrix codes are employed, with place-holder characters representing the numeric character in position 5 of the fully developed code. The purpose of this is to make the text volume more manageable than if all possible codes were to be listed, particularly in chapter N. A lower-case x is used as place-holder in group AC and a lower-case y in chapter N and group TN. Lists of permitted numeric substitutions for the place-holder character of the individual code groups in question are supplied, describing the significance of each permitted numeric character.

It should be noted that while all place-holder substitutions listed in group AC are permitted, there are numerous possible substitutions in the individual code groups of chapter N that may define impossible or nonsensical procedures. (E.g.: In some code groups it may be possible to develop a code describing medullary nailing of a bone that lacks a medullary canal, such as the patella.) This possibility is not thought to be of great practical significance, as the need to classify non-existing procedures will not arise. In cases of doubt, reference may be made to the complete sequential list of codes for this chapter, where non-existing procedures have been excluded. Computer systems should be designed to disallow the entry of codes that are not present in the complete list of codes.

It should also be noted that, while the character 9 is frequently listed as an unspecified substitute for place-holder y in position 5 of chapter N codes, this merely reflects the varying level of specification frequently needed for procedures belonging to the same procedure group (position 3 group) of this chapter. Its use to construct unspecified codes where further specification has been developed is not allowed, and such unspecified codes are not found in the complete sequential code list for this chapter.

Code sequence for reoperations and supplementary codes

Reoperations: The code for reoperations (character W in position 2 of the code) should always be the first code used to describe the operation and appear before the code or codes for the procedure or procedures executed during the reoperation.

Supplementary codes: Codes from chapter Z should appear after the basic code to which the chapter Z code is appended. When more than one supplementary code is employed, ZXA-ZXD and ZZ codes, describing technical details of the individual procedure, should appear before other supplementary codes (ZXE-ZXG and ZS), describing circumstances and events relating to the entire surgical session.

E.g.:

JCE 40 Reconstruction of oesophagus using flap
ZZR 10 Flap of skin and muscle

and optionally:

ZXD 10 Scheduled procedure
ZXE 20 More than three and less than five hours
ZXG 05 Intraoperative closed cardiac compression

Composite procedures and multiple procedures

Some well established standard procedures consist of a set combination of more than one procedure that may otherwise occur independently. When such a standard procedure is frequent and invariably embraces the same component procedures, the combined standard procedure may be allocated a basic code, as a composite procedure code.

A composite code is equivalent to any other basic procedure code and represents its content of component procedures, which are not coded separately. E.g.:

JAH 20 Staging laparotomy
With systematic lymph node biopsies and biopsy of liver in lymphoma
Concurrent splenectomy, see: JMA 10

In this operation, the mandatory regional lymph node biopsies and liver biopsy are not coded separately. A splenectomy is usually, but not invariably, performed and must be coded separately.

In the case of lymph node excision as part of an operation where the basic procedure code does not embrace lymph node excision, multiple codes are employed.

E.g.:

HAB 40 Wedge excision of mammary gland
 PJD 42 Excision of axillary lymph nodes

and optionally:

ZXA 00 Right side

Code sequence in multiple procedures

If more than one procedure is executed at the same time and there is no composite procedure code covering the combination, multiple codes must be registered with the main procedure code appearing first and the others in chronological sequence. The main procedure is the procedure that in the judgement of the surgeon is the most extensive and requires most of the resources employed.

E.g.:

GAE 30 Repair of combined injury to chest wall and diaphragm
 AAD 00 Evacuation of epidural haematoma
 EDC 35 Closed reduction and immobilisation of fracture of mandible

and optionally:

ZXD 00 Emergency procedure

Unrelated concurrent procedures are coded as multiple procedures above. E.g.:

JKA 20 Cholecystectomy
JAB 10 Repair of inguinal hernia

and optionally:

ZXD 10 Scheduled procedure

If supplementary codes related to individual procedures are used in multiple procedure coding, they should appear immediately after the procedure to which they belong. E.g.:

PDG 10 Operation on infrarenal abdominal aorta for aneurysm
ZXD 10 Scheduled procedure
PDE 30 Thrombectomy or embolectomy of iliac artery
ZXD 00 Emergency procedure

Bilateral operations

When the same operation is performed on both sides, the operation may be coded as two independent procedures sequentially or by use of the common basic procedure code and supplementary code for bilaterality.

E.g.:

NBJ 51 Internal fixation of fracture of humerus using intramedullary nail
NBJ 51 Internal fixation of fracture of humerus using intramedullary nail

or:

NBJ 51 Internal fixation of fracture of humerus using intramedullary nail
ZXA 10 Bilateral

Surgical approaches

In procedures where only one surgical approach is possible, a separate code for the approach (e.g.: Laparotomy, thoracotomy, craniotomy) is not used. Nor should a separate code be used if the simplest or most common approach is used. If a more extensive approach is used, a separate code for this approach may be used.

E.g.:

JBC 00 Gastro-oesophageal antireflux operation
GAB 10 Antero- or postero-lateral thoracotomy

CHAPTER G

Chest wall, pleura, mediastinum, diaphragm, trachea, bronchus and lung

GA	Chest wall, pleura and diaphragm
GB	Trachea
GC	Bronchus
GD	Lung
GE	Mediastinum
GW	Reoperations on chest wall, pleura, mediastinum, diaphragm, trachea, bronchi and lungs

Puncture, needle biopsy and other minor procedures, see: TG

Significance of the last digit of codes

In chapters G, J, K, L and M, the last digit of the code is used to identify the approach in the following manner:

- Digits 0, 3 and 6: Open and other non-endoscopic operations or procedures
- Digits 1, 4 and 7: Endoscopic operations or procedures through puncture or incision
Includes (Chapter G): Thoracoscopy and thoracoscopic procedures
- Digits 2, 5 and 8: Transluminal endoscopic procedures, i.e. through natural or artificial body orifices
Includes (Chapter G): Tracheoscopic and bronchoscopic procedures, endoscopic procedures through pleuro-cutaneous window Diagnostic transluminal endoscopy, including endoscopy of pleura through pleuro-cutaneous window, see: UG (Chapter U).

For codes with the fourth position digit 9 (the “other” codes), only the last digits 6, 7 and 8 are used, with significance as above.

Please note the following difference between transluminal endoscopy and invasive or therapeutic procedures performed in the course of transluminal endoscopy:

Transluminal endoscopy, frequently allowing examination of several connected organ cavities, is classified (in Chapter U) according to the most common main target for the category of endoscopy in question. Transluminal endoscopy with simple biopsy, including brush cytology, is classified as endoscopy, not as endoscopic surgical procedure.

Endoscopic procedures are classified according to the location where they are actually performed, and then by action and technique.

In Chapter G, for example, (transluminal) endoscopic polypectomy in trachea may be performed at tracheoscopy or bronchoscopy.

Please note that mediastinoscopy is by definition not endoscopy, as no body or organ cavity is entered or examined, only tissue cleavage planes.

Significance of the last digit of codes

In chapters G, J, K, L and M, the last digit of the code is used to identify the approach in the following manner:

- Digits 0, 3 and 6: Open and other non-endoscopic operations or procedures
Note: Procedures not otherwise specified in the code texts are open operations or procedures
- Digits 1, 4 and 7: Endoscopic operations or procedures through puncture or incision
Includes (Chapter J): Laparoscopy, laparoscopic and thoracoscopic procedures
Includes: Use of auxiliary stabs or minor incisions. The procedure is classified as laparoscopic or thoracoscopic if dissection and preparation of the organ in question is performed endoscopically, even if parts of the operation are performed through a minor auxiliary incision
Note: In the code texts, these procedures are specified as thoracoscopic or laparoscopic
- Digits 2, 5 and 8: Transluminal endoscopic procedures, i.e. through natural or artificial body orifices
Includes (Chapter J): Procedures in the course of oesophagoscopy, gastroscopy, enteroscopy, coloscopy, sigmoidoscopy
Note: The term “endoscopic” in code texts implies transluminal endoscopic procedures

In the case of codes with digit 9 in the fourth position (the “other” codes), only the last digits 6, 7 and 8 are available, with significance as above.

Please note the following difference between transluminal endoscopy and invasive or therapeutic procedures performed in the course of transluminal endoscopy:

Transluminal endoscopy, frequently allowing examination of several connected organ cavities, is generally classified (in Chapter U) according to the most common main target for the category of endoscopy in question, see: Note to UJ. Transluminal endoscopy with simple biopsy, including brush cytology, is classified as endoscopy, not as endoscopic surgical procedure.

Endoscopic procedures are classified according to the location where they are actually performed, and then by action and technique.

For example, in Chapter J transluminal endoscopic polypectomy in small intestine may be performed at gastroscopy, enteroscopy, colonoscopy or ERCP.

Significance of the last digit of codes

In chapters G, J, K, L and M, the last digit of the code is used to identify the approach in the following manner:

- Digits 0, 3 and 6: Open and other non-endoscopic operations or procedures
Note: Procedures not otherwise specified in the code texts are open operations or procedures
- Digits 1, 4 and 7: Endoscopic operations or procedures through puncture or incision
Includes (Chapter K): Laparoscopy, percutaneous nephroscopy and percutaneous ureteronephroscopy with appurtenant endoscopic procedures
Includes: Use of auxiliary stabs or minor incisions. A procedure is classified as percutaneous endoscopic if dissection and preparation of the organ in question is performed endoscopically, even if parts of the operation are performed through a minor auxiliary incision
Note: In the code texts, these procedures are specified according to endoscopy wherever possible.
- Digits 2, 5 and 8: Transluminal endoscopic procedures, i.e. through natural or artificial body orifices
Includes (Chapter K): Procedures in the course of urethroscopy, cystoscopy, retrograde ureteroscopy and retrograde ureteronephroscopy

In the case of codes with the digit 9 in the fourth position (the “other” codes), only the last digits 6, 7 and 8 are available, with significance as above.

Please note the following difference between transluminal endoscopy and invasive or therapeutic procedures performed in the course of transluminal endoscopy:

Transluminal endoscopy, frequently allowing examination of several connected organ cavities, is generally classified (in Chapter U) according to the most common main target for the category of endoscopy in question, see: Note to UK. Transluminal endoscopy with simple biopsy, including brush cytology, is classified as endoscopy, not as endoscopic surgical procedure

Endoscopic procedures are classified according to the location where they are actually performed, and then by action and technique.

For example, in Chapter K transluminal endoscopic ureterolithotripsy may be performed at percutaneous ureteronephroscopy or retrograde ureteroscopy.

LC	Uterus and uterine ligaments
LD	Cervix uteri
LE	Vagina

LG	Female sterilisation
LW	Reoperations on female genital organs

Significance of the last digit of codes

In chapters G, J, K, L and M, the last digit of the code is used to identify the approach in the following manner:

Digits 0, 3 and 6: Open and other non-endoscopic operations or procedures

Note: Procedures not otherwise specified in the code texts are open operations or procedures

Digits 1, 4 and 7: Endoscopic operations or procedures through puncture or incision

Includes (Chapter L): Laparoscopy, salpingoscopy, ovarioscopy, culdoscopy and procedures performed in the course of these

Includes: Use of auxiliary stabs or minor incisions. The procedure is classified as laparoscopic if dissection and preparation of the organ in question is performed endoscopically, even if parts of the operation are performed through a minor auxiliary incision

Note: In the code texts, these procedures are specified as laparoscopic, salpingoscopic or ovarioscopic

Digits 2, 5 and 8: Transluminal endoscopic procedures, i.e. through vagina and cervix uteri

Includes (Chapter L): Procedures in the course of hysteroscopy, microhysteroscopy and falloposcopy

Note: In code text, these procedures are specified as hysteroscopic or falloposcopic

In the case of codes with the digit 9 in the fourth position (the “other” codes), only the last digits 6, 7 and 8 are available, with significance as above.

Please note the following difference between transluminal endoscopy and invasive or therapeutic procedures performed in the course of transluminal endoscopy:

Transluminal endoscopy, frequently allowing examination of several connected organ cavities, is generally classified (in Chapter U) according to the most common main target for the category of endoscopy in question. Transluminal endoscopy with simple biopsy, including brush cytology, is classified as endoscopy, not as endoscopic surgical procedure.

Transluminal endoscopic procedures are classified according to the location where they are actually performed, and then by action and technique.

For example, in Chapter L hysteroscopic procedures are described for Fallopian tubes (sterilisation), uterus and cervix uteri.

CHAPTER M

Obstetric procedures

MB	Procedures after delivery or abortion
MC	Caesarean section and obstetric laparotomies
MW	Reoperations in obstetric surgery

Significance of the last digit of codes

In chapters G, J, K, L and M, the last digit of the code is used to identify the approach in the following manner:

- Digits 0, 3 and 6: Open and other non-endoscopic operations or procedures
Note: Procedures not otherwise specified in the code texts are open operations or procedures
- Digits 1, 4 and 7: Endoscopic operations or procedures through puncture or incision
Includes (Chapter M): Laparoscopy, fetoscopy and embryoscopy
Includes: Use of auxiliary stabs or minor incisions. The procedure is classified as laparoscopic if dissection and preparation of the organ in question is performed endoscopically, even if parts of the operation are performed through a minor auxiliary incision
Note: In the code texts, laparoscopic procedures are specified as such, but in the case of fetoscopy and embryoscopy, endoscopic procedures are included in the endoscopy code
- Digits 2, 5 and 8: Transluminal endoscopic procedures, i.e. through vagina and cervix uteri.
 Transluminal endoscopy with simple biopsy, including brush cytology, is classified as endoscopy, not as endoscopic surgical procedure.
Includes (Chapter M): Procedures in the course of hysteroscopy or microhysteroscopy
Note: In code text, these procedures are specified as hysteroscopic

In the case of codes with the digit 9 in the fourth position (the “other” codes), only the last digits 6, 7 and 8 are available, with significance as above.

UJ Transluminal endoscopy of gastrointestinal tract

Transluminal gastrointestinal endoscopy allows examination of several connected organ cavities. It is classified according to the most common main target for the category of endoscopy in question.

For brevity, the terms “endoscopy” and “endoscopic” in Chapter J and Section UJ refer to transluminal gastrointestinal endoscopy unless otherwise specified.

Transluminal endoscopic procedures, on the other hand, are classified in Chapter J according to the location where they are actually performed.

For instance, endoscopic polypectomy in small intestine (JFA 05) may be performed in the course of gastroscopy, enteroscopy, coloscopy or ERCP.

Upper gastrointestinal endoscopy

Upper gastrointestinal endoscopy (oesophagoscopy and gastroscopy) embraces endoscopic examination of oesophagus, stomach and duodenum, and in the presence of a suitable anastomosis certain other organs, mainly small intestine, without concurrent instrumentation of biliary tract or pancreatic duct. If the stomach or duodenal bulb are examined purposely in the course of ERCP, the endoscopy should be classified as both gastroscopy and ERCP.

UJC Oesophagoscopy

Endoscopic examination of oesophagus only

If the oesophagus is examined in the course of gastroscopy, or if examination or procedures are carried out beyond the oesophagus, the endoscopy is classified as gastroscopy, even if the oesophagus was its main target.

UJC 02 Rigid oesophagoscopy

UJC 05 Rigid oesophagoscopy with biopsy

UJC 12 Flexible oesophagoscopy

UJC 15 Flexible oesophagoscopy with biopsy

UJD Gastroscopy

Because the stomach is its most common main target, endoscopic examination of the upper gastrointestinal tract beyond the oesophagus is classified as gastroscopy, even if the oesophagus is examined as well.

Oesophagoenteroscopy after total gastrectomy is also classified as gastroscopy, because the method is the same, even in the absence of the most common target organ. Thus the code for gastroscopy covers (oesophago-)gastroscopy, (oesophago-)gastroduodenoscopy, (oesophago-)gastroenteroscopy, oesophagoenteroscopy and a few more unusual combinations

Endoscopy with instrumentation of bile or pancreatic ducts: See ERCP

Includes: With brush cytology

UJF 42 Flexible sigmoidoscopy

Includes: Endoscopy of sigmoid and rectum using flexible sigmoidoscope. A flexible sigmoidoscope is a short instrument, designed for endoscopy of the rectum and sigmoid colon. If for anatomical reasons the descending colon or higher levels are also reached (e.g. through anastomosis), the endoscopy is still classified as flexible sigmoidoscopy

UJF 45 Flexible sigmoidoscopy with biopsy

Includes: With brush cytology

UJG Proctoscopy

UJG 02 Proctoscopy

Endoscopy of rectum and rectosigmoid using a rigid instrument. If for anatomical reasons the sigmoid colon or higher levels are also reached (e.g. through anastomosis), the endoscopy is still classified as proctoscopyEndoscopy of rectum in the course of colonoscopy and flexible sigmoidoscopy, see: UJF
